LETTER OF INTRODUCTION LETTER OF INTRODUCTION

To My Fellow Travelers:

Thank you for reviewing The Assumptions press kit. It is your invitation to evaluate the assumptions you share with the rest of the world. You can safely assume a release coming this September of 2008.

Assume this is worthy of your time...because it is, about you. I extend to you, my greatest appreciation and respect for your time shared here.

Kindest regards,

James Taylor

ABOUT JAMES ABOUT JAMES

JAMES TAYLOR HAS BEEN an international business executive for the past fifteen years. He has lived in China and Malaysia with much time invested in Turkey, India and Sri Lanka. He now resides near the Blue Ridge Parkway in the mountains of North Carolina. James grew up on a farm and cattle plantation in South Carolina. Mr. Taylor has earned a reputation as a highly strategic, analytical thinker with keen abilities to tackle very complex environments and accumulated many business awards and accolades for his entrepreneurial spirit and accomplishments in the business world.

Mr. Taylor's career allowed him access to some of the most diverse cultures on the planet. He took the time to comprehend these cultures and their belief systems in a search for answers to questions that most people have about God. His unique analytical acumen in business greatly benefited his efforts to unravel the complex belief systems in the world that are guiding us all.

During James's twenty years of travel around the globe he interviewed hundreds of religious leaders in the world's most popular religions and scores of spiritual leaders. In the early 90s Mr. Taylor turned to the sciences to unravel the mysteries he found in our diverse belief systems and acquainted himself with quantum physics and the scientific discoveries regarding how we exist on earth.

James is currently lecturing and providing seminars on the human existence around the globe and researching his next book.

THE PURPOSE THE PURPOSE

WHAT I AM EXPOSING here is the piece of the puzzle that has been missing. The scientific community has a better understanding than they used to regarding how all human beings impact the physical world. Their findings are obvious. In the past, scientists have been cautious with their opinions about science when including spiritual energy in their analysis. However, today...spiritual energy is detectable. It has real, measurable impact. I bet you didn't know this did you? It is this piece of the formula that has been missing. You need to know this. It is a paradigm shift in how we view ourselves and all human beings.

When you apply this new view of yourself to your beliefs you can see them in a much more potent way. Your beliefs are the fuel source to this energy. It can be negative or positive. You are in charge of this. The assumptions that support our beliefs simply illustrate which energies (negative or positive) are fueling them and the impact they are having. I found that a very small dose of "shock and awe" was in order to wake us all up. So don't get offended with the examples I use to illustrate how, why, and what we assume about and ascribe to God. Personally, I have been both "shocked" and "awe'd." We have all subscribed to some belief system. These systems, even as sacred as we perceive them to be, all imply some assumptions about the demeanor of God. We don't think about it in these terms but they do. These assumptions built our beliefs and ultimately constructed our global community. Just look at what we constructed. We have carved up the world based on these systems and follow leaders that would divide us even further. Assuming of course, this is what your God desired you to do. He didn't.

The collective energy generated by emotions, thoughts and feelings are very powerful elements of our existence here and now this energy is measurable by science. When you see how this works you will see how each belief system works perfectly...just like yours. We no longer need division. We can unite. The earth needs us. We live here. We have all been pulling the same cart in the same way and didn't realize it. We can now all start pulling the cart in the same direction. Imagine what we could do! Hold on to that thought.

I hope you find yourself inspired to know more as you read. If it astounds you, then grow beyond your astonishment. Think!

If you recall, it was once assumed that the earth was flat and we would fall off the end of the earth. One man finally stood up and denied this assumption and set out to see for himself, yet this assumption stood firm and held as truth for a very long time. All sciences at the time were based upon it and were consequentially invalid since science was based on something assumed that indeed was not true.

It is easy to see how the truth of any matter changes the course of events in our world. Profound? Yes, of course! Most "truths" are. But you might discover your assumptions to be equally astounding!

BOOK EXCERPT BOOK EXCERPT

Creation

CREATION IS ACTUALLY THE fun part of being a human being. If you really think about it, we create some amazing things. Everything that exists on this planet except nature was created by us. Nature is sort of the stuff we started with in the beginning but everything after that we created.

Here is the missing logic: We thought we were only having physical impact on the world. Now we know! That wasn't true. Our energy affects the very structure of the atoms and cells, and the molecular structures are changed. Things may look the same but there is really more going on here.

There was some research on DNA that proves there is communication amongst matter outside of our current physical five senses.

DNA Experiment

Some tissue was taken from a group of people in one city and taken across the country to a lab. The group was exposed to various videos designed to invoke emotional reactions. Guess what? The DNA strands being monitored in both places expanded and contracted identically and simultaneously. They were still one. Something linked them together. There are communications and energy being transmitted between matter. Here it is. We know it is occurring. Masaru Emoto showed us how our energy affects water. Candice Pert showed us how it affects the human body and as you will see later, plants told us they feel it too. Now DNA is telling us the same thing. Do you need more proof than this?

Some more science—let's break it down

The ole saying of creating something out of "thin air" is true. This air is something. It is made up of gasses that have an atomic structure just like everything else. Do you realize the most dense materials known to man, when broken down to their atomic levels, are 99.99% space? It is hard to imagine a steel ball being 99.99% space, isn't it?

BOOK EXCERPT BOOK EXCERPT

Yet it is. This is true for everything and everyone at the quantum layer of things. This is our entire universe...no exceptions.

We haven't completely deciphered the atomic code that enables all things to exist...yet! But we do know this "99.99% space" is the common denominator to all things. The atom contains a nucleus comprised of protons and neutrons with some electrons whirling around outside. In between all this is 99%...something. It is something we can't yet define. Somehow, this fertile brew manifests itself as rocks and rain and ears...indeed, everything that exists. It is obvious why scientists are so enthralled with the pursuit to understand this aspect of our existence. There is something in the physical "everything" that enables it to exist. We don't know what it is, but it is acknowledged and we know where to find it. It is not matter. It has no mass. We can't even determine if "this space" has a charge. (Maybe that is where we come in the picture [our energy]!) Yet, it is the common ingredient to all physical matter. It is like the "stem cell" of everything. Okay...so what? What does this have to do with creation and you?

It means we are much more powerful beings than we used to think. There is much more going on here. Let's take look:

- The DNA experiment proves matter has a connection through some sort of energy generated by our feelings.
- We know the common denominator to all matter is 99% space. We are all made of the same stuff.
- Emoto's research provides illustration of our energy affecting matter. We can see the change.
- Candice Pert shows our energy changes the very chemical makeup of the entire human body. Science can identify it.
- ...and of course, plants (next chapter) told us they are alive and affected by our chosen disposition and resulting energy.

Conclusion:

This communications channel is channeling our emotional energy as a charge to this 99% space stuff which is everything that exists...barring nothing.

This describes the missing logic. Human beings are generating some form of energy. Just like our physical acts, these energies are also affecting things. Different way of looking at things isn't it?

This means the collective energies we generate must amass into something and have a charge ...positive or negative. Where do you think this charge comes from? That would be us. We did it. We own the outcome.

A QUICK Physics UPDATE

For us novices, physics has always been based on the idea that particle matter was separate from each other, mutually exclusive, and disconnected. This separation was also assumed to exist between these particles and space. As I mentioned before, a steel ball is still 99% space. These assumptions were incorrect.

The new view of physics now assumes they are not separate at all. Everything in the physical universe is connected. You can't disconnect from it. You are a part of it, and there is no other place or way for anything else (including you and me) to exist. Wow, isn't this a different view of things? I keep telling you...you are affecting things here! Be more careful because you are affecting us all.

This supports yet another scientific law we all know. Newton's Law for Conservation of Energy proves the same point. Matter and energy can neither be created nor destroyed. It can only change form.

Contained within Newton's Law is an even more profound question: "What changes this stuff you can't destroy or create?" If it is indeed already created as something, then how do we, let's say, reconfigure it into something else? A scientific answer would be to simply burn it or freeze it or use some force on it to change it. This is definitely true...it would change its state. However, afterwards, when we break down the new creation...it has the same 99% space stuff! Is this the "stuff" our emotions are affect ing at the molecular level? Aren't we applying our own charge to all things? Yes, we are!

Don't think that you run on batteries. You are energy, too! You are a generator. Where do you think your energy goes? Do you really believe your skin sort of keeps it in? Think again!

Remember, this is not a discussion about what you do. We are talking about who you first choose to be. This choice determines what you do. To quote Wayne Dyer, "The ancestor to every action is a thought." Synchronize your being, and you will create. This creation process is in play whether you are aware of it or not. Now that you know ...use it! Know that you have been using it all along. This is sculpting your reality. Get it?

One Little Girl in Myanmar

James Taylor

WE ALL LIVE IN the same world. This is a story of just one of our inhabitants. Let's call her Emmie. She lives in a brothel where she has lived since the age of three. She is now ten. Her parents sold her in exchange for enough money to feed her family for a month.

Her only friends are the other children in her brothel who claim a similar history. Their days are similar to any kid in some ways. They try to find some time each day to just play and kid around. There isn't much time for such but each day they find a space to fit it in. The food is cheap but she eats regularly. Emmie is very fond of chewing gum. Whenever a client is made particularly happy he will buy her some peppermint gum from the madam. At least one day a week she makes an extra effort for the gum.

The only thing Emmie knows about the world is what her clients tell her. They speak of places and experiences that she can only imagine in her mind. When she has time she ponders these places and imagines what they must be like. She recalls one man telling her about a building in Bangkok that was so tall you couldn't see the top when standing at the bottom. There are no skyscrapers in her small world...only her imagination of them.

Today is a special day. A group of wealthy businessmen have chosen a few of the girls to be delivered back to their compound. There will be lush gardens, a small lake and lots of fruit trees. Emmie has never been further than the next street over from her small shack...ever! Today will be a special day in her life. The madam didn't even have to awaken her. She was up early to wash with her small frame with a fresh bucket of water before the other kids got it dirty. One of the older girls gave her a used dress with blue flowers on it and she feels special with it draped over her naked body. The sun is peaking through some torn curtains as she dances around in a circle full of expectations.

There are no religious classes in a brothel. Emmie has never even heard of God or Allah or Jesus. Emmie died at the age of twelve. On her one beautiful day by the lake, under a fruit tree in the gardens, a man gave her AIDS. This is the story of one of our inhabitants. God, the creator, Allah, Jesus...didn't set up a separate set of laws in this physical universe for her. As a human being she existed by the same laws as you. You are the same.

Within your belief system, what you believe about your God...what does your God do with Emmie's soul? She died.

If she is welcomed into heaven and you believe you must still earn your way there then would you substitute your life for hers? This would be your ticket, your pathway, your guarantee to heaven. Shouldn't we all line up for such an existence? Don't you desire to go to heaven? Well, does your belief make her life to God more acceptable than your own? Do you still need to struggle to be acceptable? In this belief, Emmie didn't. This would be an interesting design by the creator of all things...wouldn't it?

Maybe Emmie went to hell because of the sinful life she led. Emmie was a prostitute...a whore. She never praised God or Allah or gave any credence to any such idea. Given her sinful existence perhaps you believe your God sent her to hell. If you believe this life is the only chance a soul gets in the physical world then if she didn't go to heaven wouldn't hell be the only alternative? Maybe not.

There is one more option. Imagine that your non-physical self, your soul, was designed to survive your physical existence and survive eternally. Upon survival, existing in a non-physical place and existing eternally, wouldn't it make sense that you could once again choose to re-enter the physical universe again to experience physical life again?

Think about it. Emmie never did. Know which assumption you are making about the very God you believe in. Like Emmie, you too inhabit our world by the same rules. Imagine you are Emmie...because you are!

Religion in Schools

James Taylor

INDEED, WHAT CONUNDRUMS WE humans get ourselves into. We built a country to protect religious freedoms. Smart design. By doing so, the government protects itself from the downfalls observed in other countries where the dominant religion was entangled with the government and the religion ultimately ruled supreme. The government wasn't designed to be separate from the religion and thus collapsed. Let's give a round of applause to our government's foresight and intent.

This now leaves our government 200 years later with the engrained position of non-advocation of any religion. Again, this was the intended outcome of the original design. So the government funds and curriculum for schools can't be biased. Obvious problem: if the government includes religion in the schools or anything referring to GOD, then which one do they choose?

The only real option is to teach them all. We all recognize this would take up too much class time. So what do they do? If they decided to teach the Hindu faith, then all the other religions would rightfully take action and protest. Let me remind everyone that this is our government protecting our religious freedoms.

A Resolve to the Conundrum

I don't think this problem can be solved the way it is being addressed.

"We can't solve problems by using the same kind of thinking we used when we created them."—Albert Einstein

Maybe we are looking at the wrong curriculum here. Let's say we shift our focus to us...human beings. After all, isn't this the common denominator of all belief systems? Maybe it's time we humans updated our curriculum a bit to include more current subject matter. Given our shared common denominator, shouldn't an understanding of us, human beings, be a worthy subject matter? Let's take a look and see what you think...

GENRE: THE HUMAN RACE

There are some key ideas all religions teach us. In fact, they aren't even religious ideas at all...only adopted by religions. If I teach kids not to kill people, then which religion does this belong to? If I suggest kids treat others with kindness and love, which religion owns these rights? Are these bad subjects to teach? Shouldn't these basics be the beginning of the process?

So, given the government's conundrum, I would like to make a suggestion: a real paradigm shift in thinking. Instead of teaching kids which religion to believe in, why don't we teach them what we scientifically know about how they exist here and let them learn how they are being human beings in every religion? This is better armament for understanding their own faiths...whatever they may be. Confused? Let me elaborate.

Think about this curriculum.

HUMAN RACE BIOLOGY 101

We have unraveled the human emotional system. It is no longer a mystery as to the effects emotions have on our own bodies. Every emotion secretes a unique protein into the body, and the receptors on every cell in your body take them in. This process changes the chemical structure of every cell. You physically are what you are feeling. Even a child can determine that feeling angry is not something that makes them feel good. Shouldn't they know what feeling anger does to them at their cellular level? Is teaching them to be stingier about employing this emotion a bad idea? Instead of focusing on their religion, let them focus on what their beliefs, their states of being, are doing to them! Make it personal because it is personal. Should any religion teach them to hate, then they fully comprehend what this hate does to them...first! Worthy to be taught? Is this religious?

THE BEING HUMAN RELATIONS 101

Masaru Emoto in Japan published all his work regarding how emotions change the physical structure of water. He simply photographed water being exposed to various emotions. Love makes a water molecule crystallize like a diamond. Anger makes it look like frozen vomit. Hey, he isn't making this stuff up...he is recording it! Our emotions not only affect us at our cellular level but also affect everything around us. The world is mostly water. Human beings are mostly water. I bet these kids are unaware they are having such an impact on things. Don't you think they should know this? Should any religion advocate they use any negative emotion, then these kids will understand the impact of adopting that belief. Worthy of knowing? Is this religious?

THE DISCOVERY AND VISION CLASS 100

What if we had a "discovery" class to include the newest findings about us, human beings? Is this such a bad thing to know? For example: Lynne McTaggart has conducted experiments to measure the effects of our thoughts and emotional states of being and published a book on the matter. Her experiments followed standard scientific protocols. She placed a bunch of folks in a room in London and had them concentrate on only one thought and feeling: make a leaf glow. We all know leaves don't glow...right? The leaf was in Arizona in a lab being monitored with light sensing equipment. They didn't need it. They observed the leaf glowing with their naked eyes. Is this something our kids should know? Isn't it their minds that will solve the next big problems in the world? I think if I were a kid I would like to hear what is going on out there and see if any of it interests me. Cutting edge today is tomorrow's job market.

THE HUMAN PHYSICS CLASS 200

Have you ever heard of the "Quantum Eraser" experiment? It takes a past event that has already occurred and changes it back to its original state before it happened. Sound impossible? It isn't. This is a repeatable experiment. Is this too dangerous for us to know? Let's allow kids to think. There is something going on here, and I bet you don't know what it is. Well, me either. Who do you think is going to figure this out? My guess is that it will be one of your kids.

BACK TO OUR GOVERNMENT

Now, let's go back to our government for a second. Do these classes offend any government position? No religions are involved...or are they? All religions teach us how to feel, think, and then be in relation to matters. Knowing what these feelings are doing to you physically and to all matter around you provides a keen tool for helping decide if you would like to subscribe. The result is a generation of beings being careful about how they feel about themselves, you, the world, and life. Isn't this the positive effect Christians would like taught in school? What about Muslims? Buddhists? Aha! Maybe we have found the solution. What if you had known about these discoveries when you were growing up? Do you think it might have had an effect on you?

Hey...just a thought.

Reincarnation

James Taylor

REINCARNATION HAS BEEN DEBATED a thousand ways. Here is a fresh view that might shed some new light on an old subject. Assume for a moment, you are an aborted soul. Instead of worrying about the doctor or the mom who aborted you...wouldn't you be more concerned with what God was going to do with your soul? I could only come up with three options for you.

- You are going to hell.
- You are going to heaven.
- You get another chance at life.

Are there any other options? If so, I can't think of any. So let's look closer at your options.

YOU GO TO HELL

Can you really ascribe this demeanor to God? Most people believe you only get one existence to prove yourself worthy. In this case, you never had such a chance. So your God sends you to hell. Really? What sort of God would do this? This is hardly a flattering demeanor you ascribe to your God...is it? Perhaps I am going out on a limb here but I'm guessing that you don't believe God is going to send you to hell so let's look at God's next option.

YOU GO TO HEAVEN

Now this sounds more like a loving God doesn't it? I suspect most of you believe this is the answer...but wait. If this is true, then a sure way to get to heaven is to die from an abortion! This means living your life would put you at risk of going to hell but being aborted insures you go to heaven. Pardon me for saying this but...doesn't this mean, for our children's sake, we should abort them? Wouldn't this be the best choice? This literally means your parents did you a favor by sending you directly to heaven so you can't screw up your life...doesn't it? There is no risk of hell in this option is there?

We should all applaud your parents for killing you instead of putting them in jail! Does this sound like a system God would set up? Do you really believe this? Without reincarnation then heaven and hell are your only two options...so which is it? Tuff choice isn't it?

YOU GET ANOTHER CHANCE

Yes, this is reincarnation! Most of us do believe the soul lives eternally so something happens to you after the abortion. If you aren't sent to hell or heaven, then where did you go? Doesn't another temporary incarnation make more sense for you, the eternal soul?

IT JUST GETS WORSE!

Let's assume you weren't aborted but instead lived a few days and then died. The same questions must be asked. What does God do with you? Assuming you aren't going to hell then is dying shortly after birth your ticket to heaven? Wouldn't this be a most desirable event? We should all hope this happens to our children...shouldn't we? Living a life would then be something you would actually want to avoid...wouldn't it? Does this really sound like a system designed by God for an eternal soul? If not, maybe it isn't God that came up with this idea at all...maybe we did.

I suspect this realization might shock you a bit but these are the assumptions you make about God when you take a position to be against reincarnation.

This isn't a position for or against abortion or a child's death. It is simply a complete evaluation of the options for your soul. Which one did you choose? Which choice do you think God made? Some bells should be going off in your head about now. Think about it.

Finally, The Explanation The World Has Been Waiting For!
*Science has unraveled the mystery regarding which belief system is right! They all are!

June 24, 2008 – Asheville, NC - The mystery and confusion about which belief system is the right one is finally cleared up...and just in the nick of time! James Taylor has just released his new book to finally give the world reason and evidence to unite without argument – The Assumptions (979-0-979-4367-0-3, Trade paperback, 260 pp, 5-1/2 x 8-1/2, $19.95)

Written in a conversational style and easily read layman's terms, James Taylor exposes what science actually knows about human energy and how it works. Have you ever wondered what the magic is underneath the Law of Attraction and The Secret? Modern science has the answer and James Taylor masterfully illustrates the answers through entertaining life experiences that are stimulating and mind-provoking.

The Assumptions is a genuine paradigm shift in how we view ourselves, the world and our beliefs. The author applies a fresh view to some of the world's most popular beliefs and illuminates the assumptions that lie underneath with some astonishing results. Finally the world's religions can stop arguing, fighting and even killing over who is right ...they all are! The Assumptions is the right medicine, at the right time for a world in chaos.

James Taylor is a retired international business executive with a reputation for highly strategic, analytical thinking and "out of the box" perceptions to complex problems.

SUMMARY SUMMARY

THE WORLD IN WHICH we live was constructed by us—human beings. Our belief systems guided our designs. The majority of the world's beliefs are grounded in some religion. The beliefs we subscribe to in our religions in turn ascribe demeanors to God, the belief's source and origin. These are your first assumptions. You should know what these are. These assumptions are the foundation of all you believe.

The Assumptions incorporates the latest in biology, science, and quantum physics to illuminate what is known about how you as a spiritual and physical being...be here. You should know this...because it is describing you! In this stimulating and mind-provoking book, James Taylor opens the door to a profound understanding of how our belief systems drive our existence. You have read the books on what to do to succeed in your life. Now you can understand the full impact you were having while you were doing these things. It is a paradigm shift in how we see ourselves and our world.

The Assumptions masterfully illustrates how our beliefs architected the world we now inhabit and, most importantly, how you powerfully contribute. Your impact here, through your beliefs, has a much greater effect on things than you ever imagined!

You will achieve a greater understanding of you, your beliefs, your life, and, more importantly, everyone else's lives and beliefs. All human beings are operating by the same rules, and we exist here in exactly the same way. Collectively, it is this essence of how we create our world that binds us all together. It doesn't matter if you are Muslim, Jewish, Christian, or Buddhist. The creator put laws in play for human beings...without exceptions.

Simply put, The Assumptions illustrates how your beliefs are using these laws and what your interpretations of your beliefs are assuming about God. It is that simple. Enjoy.
